SEA CHANTEYS, WORK SONGS, & MARITIME MUSIC

The Johnson Girls, an energetic all-woman mostly a` capella group, enjoys wide acclaim for their powerhouse performances of rousing work songs, haunting ballads and hair-raising harmonies with an emphasis on songs of the sea and shore such as sea shanties, maritime songs, traditional work songs and songs of fishermen and their wives, including songs with an Afro-Caribbean influence, of the inland waterways, of fishing, mining, Irish, Anglo-American, Italian, French, and Canadian ballads and work songs, to be more specific. (Or was that Pacific?) They sing of strong women taking care of the business of life. Their folksongs tackle problems head on, taking no prisoners. With their diverse song list, they bring a unique interpretation to their repertoire while preserving the traditional roots of the music.
